We have authority for saying that this is pure fiction from the first line to the last. The Russian Minister has expressed no offense; there has been no interruption in the relations between him and the President and Secretary of State; his calls on these officials have been as frequent as usual; the "apologies" of Messrs. Sumner and Butler have consequently not been heeded or made; and the fine flight of reprotorial imagination in regard to the el-oquent but vain effort of General Butler to induce the President "to retract," is brought to earth by the same inexorable logic of facts. As above stated, the whole story is a fiction

HOW DR. ROUNDER BEAT HIS BOYS.

A oneer old-fashioned house was "Clo verbobs," where the sensible, but some-what queer Dr. Rounder kept his school. The Doctor had a fine garden and orchard, in which all manner of pleasant fruits were to be found from the early strawberrries to the antumn plums and apples. but Mrs. Pinnicker, the housekeeper, did not agree with them now and then. Many grievous complaints did she carry to her master of the nursing and doctoring arising from the boys eating unripe fruit, or too much of what was ripe, and she so worried him that he was fain to let her lock the gate, and give out such to come up and have had some trouble in the complex of the aller. were sent to eat it.

All the boys were of the same opinion

she so worried him that he was fain to let her lock the gate, and give out such measure of the dainties as she thought fit.

For thiis, the big boys resolved to be revenged. The ther of her spectacles, the drowning of her cat, and various other plots were made, and abandoned as unworthy of gentlemen and disgraceful to the Doctor's pupils. Nevertheless, something, it was decided, must be done. It chanced that, in a game of hide-andseek, one boy, the hider, climbed the roof of the house, and, creeping toward the apple-room end, got down an ivy-covered chimney. The chimney was very large, and he descended rather quicker than he wished into the chamber beneath, and fell within a few inches of a large hole in the floor, where the grate had once been.

After many a consultation in the play-ground, measures were agreed on; and the next day the ringleaders, were down the chimney smelling the apples and schem-ing how to get at them. It was too far-to jump or drop down; but a rope—there were the cords of the boxes—what could be more handy? be more handy?

They twisted and twined them in and

'Let's drop down a basket," said one. "Our supper basket," said another.
"Yes," said the small boy, "and it would be easier to go down and come up in the basket; the cord hurts."

Accordingly, that night, after supper, the market basket was in its ordinary place, but the following morning nobody could find it; where it was hidden, and how, I cannot tell, but the next play-hour

So she went to him again with more consternation than the Doctor thought all the apples were worth; but he said he would see the apples and judge for him-self, for by a visit now and then he would be able to settle the question of theft or no theft; so he took the key.

Mrs. Pinnicker seemed so quiet about her second loss that the boys thought
